Classroom Rewards

Federal law requires every school district to have a local wellness policy. These policies address nutrition education, physical activity, school meals and all other foods and drinks available at school. Since foods and drinks are a part of every school day, local wellness policies can build healthy school environments that support successful students eating smart and moving more. Research shows that children and teens who eat smart and move more focus better and have fewer behavior problems. They also have better math, reading and writing test scores. As families, educators and administrators, you have the chance to put the policy into practice. You can make a difference by encouraging healthy options for fundraising, concessions, school stores, vending, classroom rewards and school celebrations.

Rewards and incentives are one way to encourage good behavior and improve academic performance. Your local wellness policy can define how teachers reward students. There are many good ways to reward students without using food or treats. Food and treat rewards can act against healthy eating messages and interfere with natural hunger cues. The power of the simple words “you did a great job” works well because respect and words of appreciation go a long way for everyone. It is important to encourage self-confidence and self-motivation so that students value their own work.

Take Action Now

School Board Members
- Are classroom rewards covered in your district’s local wellness policy? If not, include in your policy limits on food as a reward or incentive.

Example Classroom Rewards Policy in North Carolina

Clay County Schools:
In a school environment that supports healthy behaviors, teachers are encouraged to use non-food rewards for individual students or classes. Schools shall be supplied with examples of effective non-food rewards. “Foods of minimum nutritional value” shall not be used as rewards. If food is used, only nutrient-rich foods in appropriate portion sizes shall be given to students.
