YES	NO
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	Meal Components and Quantities – Validation that meals claimed for reimbursement contain the required meal components and quantities
Finding Detail: (Breakfast) At one school, the production records do not substantiate sufficient food items were provided for all reimbursable breakfast meals claimed for three days during the month of review (December 2016). Since all students on the day of review selected sufficient food items and production records substantiated ample food items were provided, this shortage of food items on the days in question indicates a production record recording issue during the month of review. (Breakfast) At one school, all meal components/food items served for breakfast on the day of review were not documented on the production record. The menu was enhanced by offering additional food options for students; however, the food items were not identified or recorded on the daily production record. (Lunch) At one school, the minimum weekly grain requirement planned for students selecting the daily chef salad option was insufficient. On the day of review, students were allowed to select two servings of crackers with the chef salad resulting in the minimum daily requirement of one grain being met; however, the total weekly grain serving size available was only equal to seven point five grain equivalents. The weekly minimum of eight grain servings was not available for students to select with this entrée choice.
